Social ..... Events

The Season's Amusements in Town and Country—Surprise Parties as Popular as Ever.

OCIETY in the rural districts has begun its winter season with a number of parties, receptions etc, and the indication are that there will be no lack of social functions to relieve to monotomy of the long and dreary winter.

One of the most pleasant events of the month was a surprise party on Friday evening of last week, given by the friends of of Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Pool at their home near McDonough, Mr. C. N. Riley who has successfully arranged many another such an affair, was one of the conspirators on this occasion, and 'tis needless to say, succeeded in his undertaking. One of the most delightful features of the evening was the music furnished by the "Pool Orchestra," composed of the four brothers, all of whom are popular musicians, and their sister Miss Mary Pool who is an accomplished pianist.

Those who were present on this very delightful occasion from Middletown were: Misses Mary and Lucy Cochran May Holten Miss Wright Misses Clayton, Miss Will Beasten, Miss Derrickson, Miss Rothwell, Mr. and Mrs. James Burnham, Dr. J. C. Stites, W. R. Reynolds, J. C. Kelley, Will Lockwood, Ed Voughan, Reese Parker, John Rothwell: From Odessa Mr. and Mrs. John Rothwell; Mt Pleasant Mr. and Mrs. J. F. Eliason, and Miss Elison; McDonough; Messrs Frank and Howard Pool, Dr. Stewart Pool, Miss Mary Pool, Mr. and Mrs. Boyd Cleaver; St. Georges; Mr. and Mrs. Shultz, Miss Shultz, Dr. Fritz, Miss Mame McWhorter, Miss Maggie Clark, Miss Ebbie Griffin Mr. and Mrs. Stuckert, Mr. and Mrs. Sutton, Miss Sutton, Mr. Heisel, Mr. Smith, Miss Linda Clark' Mr. Harry Clark, Mr. Clayton Biley. Mr. and Mrs. W, E. Ellison; Delaware City, Miss Fannie Clark, Miss Allie Clark, Miss Jennie Clark, Mr. Stewart Clark.

GOLDEN WEDDING.

Mr. and Mrs. Rothwell Celebrate the Fiftieth Anniversary of their Marriage.

Mr. and Mrs. Gideon E Rothwell celebrated the fiftieth anniversary of their marriage at their home at Collin's Beach last week. A large company of friends and relatives were present, and the occasion was one of great pleasure to all participants.

Mr. Rothwell is the oldest son of the late Major Rothwell of the "Levels," and his wife is a daughther of George Collins for whom Collins' Beach is named. They have always lived in Blackbird hundred, and are well known throughout the country Their nine children are: Ex-Coroner G. C. Rothwell, of Blackbird hundred, Mrs. Dr. G C. Borst, of Mt. Union, Pa.. Mrs. J. A. Gayton, of Lewistown, Pa.; Mrs. James Schaffer of Mt. Union Pa.; Mrs. Thomas Archy, of Huntingdon, Pa.; William Rothwell, of New York City, and B. F. C. Rothwell, of Winslow Junction, N. J. Miss Annie E. Rothwell, of Thoroughfare Neck; Mrs. Mary E. Kough, of Mt. Union; Pa.

Old Farmer Hopkin's.

Mr. Frank Davidson will present his very popular spectacular production "Old Farmer Hopkin's" in the Middletown Opera House to-night. Mr. Davidson is highly commended and his singing is said to be a great attraction. His whole company is above the average, and the play with the special scenery and accompaning stage setting add much to the popularity of the play. The same performance was given in Havre de Grace this week, and the manager of the Opera House there sends the following telegram of endorsement. "Farmer Hopkins gives a delightful entertainment, elegant every way." Tickets now on sale at W. S. Leatherbury. Don't fail to witness this play to-night.

Grange Officers Elected.

The Smyrna Grange, No. 21, at their last meeting elected the following officers: Master J. E. Carter; Overseer, W. S. Jones, Kenton; Lecturer, J. C. Robinson. Chaplain, Robert Darrah; Secretary, Samuel Bilderback; Treasurer, A. L. Hudson, Sr.; Steward Joseph Vaupelt, Greenspring; Assistant Steward, J. F. Gootee, and Gatekeeper, Joseph Lightcap. This grange is now one of our interesting organizations, and is proving quite profitable to those who attend it regularly. They have now a membership of 50, meeting every Saturday after noon in Odd Fellows Hall.

—"Old Farmer Hopkins," said to be one of the brightest rural dramas ever written, will be produced, January 19th, by the well-known comedian, Frank S. Davidson, and an excellent company. Special scenery, mechanical effects, specialties of a high order, all go to make "Old Farmer Hopkins" the great success it undoubtedly is. Speaking of its presentation in Pittsburg the Leader says: "At the Opera House last evening that irresistable and quaint comedian. Frank S. Davidson, kept a large audiecne in good humor for three straight hours. He is one of the rising comedians of the day."

Farmea's Institute.

The Farmers' Institute of New Castle county will hold a meeting in the Comegys Building next Tuesday at 2 p. m. Farmers, their wives and all persons interested in agriculture, the dairy, and creamery are invited to attend this meeting. Mr. Geo. T. Powell of New York will give an address on "How to obtain the most value from the dairy." The subject is interesting and timely and the committee in charge is very desirous that our farmers attend this meeting. It is free to all.

William Lore.

William Lore, a brother of Chief Justice Chas. B. Lore, died at his home near Mt. Pleasant on Wednesday in his 76th year. He was a well known and highly esteemed citizen of upright life, and his death is lamented by a circle of friends. He leaves four children, Mrs. J. F. Eliason, and Mrs. Boughman, and Chas. and Dallas Lore. His funereal will take place to-day, the services being about noon in Odessa M. E. Church. Interment the M. E. Cemetery.

LITTLE LOCALS.

—Services in the M. E. Church this week have been interesting and well attended.

—Mr. Henery Talbot has leased the Col. Clayton home, and will take possession March 25.

—The Missson Band of Forest Church will have an entertainment at Mrs. Gilpin, Monday evening.

—The Town Hall was sold at Sheriff's sale last Saturday. The Philadelphia Trust co. being the purchaser.

—The Christian Endeavor Society will meet in the Presbyterian Church on Sunday evening at 6.45 o'clock. All are cordially invited. Mr. Jacob Maxwell will lead the meeting.

—The Magic Lantern Exhibition given St. Anne's S. S. Hall Wednesday evening was much enjoyed by those who attended it, and "A trip to Philadelphia" was never so full of pleasure and profit. The S. S. funds were satisfactorely swelled thereby.

PERSONALITIES

Little Lines About Men and Women and What They Are Doing.

—Miss Eliza Cochrhn of Elwin Pa. is visiting her friends near town.

PENINSULA NOTES.

Smyrna is already getting ready for company, in anticipation of the coming session of the Wilmington M. E. Conference that convenes in March.

Mr. Charles F. Warwick, the republican nominee for the mayorality of Philadelphia is a brother of Mrs. Eben F. Perkins of Chestertown Md.

The Jr. O. U. A. M. of Cheswold, will hold a festival in Cooper's Hall Thursday and Friday evenings, Jan. 31st and Feb. 1st. The menu will consist of chicken salad, oysters, ice cream, cake etc.

Mrs. Thomas S. Bordley, of Chestertown, and Miss Maud D. Kemp, daughter of Rev. J. D. Kemp, of Still Pond, have decided to open a store in Chestertown. The firm name will likely be Maud D. Kemp & Co.

Cards are out annonncing the marriage of Miss Hettie Williams, of Marydel, to Benjamin Cubbage, of Hazeltonville, in the Baptist church, on January, 26. Rev. Elder Rittenhouse will perform the ceremony.

Mrs. Martha Toadvine, wife of Gordon Toadvine, died in Salisbury Tuesday morning after a protracted illness. She was a daughter af the late John D. Williams and a sister of L. E. Williams, president of the Farmers and Merchants' Bank, Salisbury. She leaves two children.

Wilbur Stephens, aged 15 years, a prisoner in the jail at Chestertown, has escaped. The boy was allowed to walk in the corridors of the jail, and becoming tired of his imprisonment, heated a poker, burned the lock off and escaped easily. Stevens was serving a six months' sentence for larceny.

The Kent county, Md., almshouse sold from the farm last year about 500 bushels of wheat for $239 03 763 bushels of corn for $298 82, and, in addition, kept enough for the uses of the institution. Straw amounting to $17 81 was also sold. There are 29 inmates: white males, 6; colored males, 6; white females, 9; colored females, 6; white child, 1; colored child, 1.

The St. Michaels Argus has suspended publication and the editor, Mr. Richardson has removed to Harrington, Del., where he will continue the drug business and probably edit a paper in that town. Walter T. Todd, late of the Eastern Democrat has located in St. Michaels and on last Saturday issued the inital number of the St. Michaels News, a creditable 7-col. folio.

At the joint meeting of the Delaware State Hospital and county almhouse committees Friday afternoon, it was decided to light the two buildings at Farnhurst by electricity. Several proposals for furnishing electric light were considered. The trustees agreed upon what they thought to be the most satisfactory and economical plan to have wires run out from Wilmington. The contract was therefore awarded the Wilmington City Electric Company for five years.

S. M. REYNOLDS. & CO.

The Largest Business House in Middletown Makes an Assignment.

S. M. Reynolds & Co. have confessed judgement to John A. Reynolds, father of the two heads of the firm, for $20,000. The general business depression, the credit system and slow collections, have brought this well known firm into financial trouble.

Reynolds & Co. is the oldest mercantile house in Middletown and for many years has been the largest, best and most widely known general store in the State outside of Wilmington. Their financial trouble is cause for universal regret. As business men they are identified with every movement to benefit the town and community and have always been the leading merchant here. We hope they will be able to so adjust their affairs as to continue business at the old stand under the old name.

EDUCATIONAL INTEREST.

Summer Schools for Teachers as Viewed by a State Principal—Other School Questions of Interest to Teachers—Delaware in the Line of Progress.

MIDDLETOWN, January 16th, 1895.

EDITOR TRANSCRIPT:—In your last issue (12th inst.), you gave an article from the Sunday Star expressing disapproval of the ex-Governor's recommendations for a State training school; but granting the need of better qualified teachers.

The disapproval of such a school seems to be based on the supposition that in its limited time, it would attempt to do regular school work- It would not deserve much favor if established for this purpose, but it is designed for something not otherwise provided for by the State.

Of course the present writer is not authorized to speak for ex-Gevernor Reynolds but he may, with some propriety, speak for those among whom the proposition arose.

The Governor's message embodied two recommendations which orignated in the State Principals' Association and were unanimously approved by men of all shades of political faith because they believed that nothing better could be done for the schools at present.

These recommendations are: First, that the State establish a free Summer training school for teachers. Second, That the State, by satisfactory arrangement with the towns, open the town graded schools to advanced pupils of country districts.

The idea of the proposed summer school is not that it shall instruct its membrs in the subjects to be taught in their schools.

It would take those already fairly well prepared in the ordinary text books, and teach them how to teach so that the labor expended might accomplished the best results. It would give instruction in the best methods of teaching in primary and grammar grades. It would deal with the subjects of school management and organization, order and relation of studies, and similar topics. The work done by such a school would be entirely outside the curriculum of the regular school work but suplementary to it for those who wish to enter upon teaching with clearer conceptions of what to aim at and how to accomplish it.

On these lines a properly conducted Summer training school can render efficient service.

No one would claim for it that it could turn out thoroughly equipped teachers in one Summer, or in two Summers; but it would help to start progressive teachers in an intelligent study of principles of education and methods of instruction. It would arouse the courage and enthusiasm of the young beginner, and would give encouragement and renewed inspiration to the teacher faded with a year's work in the school room.

The question of economy should not be urged against an appropriation for such a school. Delaware is one of the nine States and Territories which up to 1892, had established no normal schools for the training of their teachers, and the small amount expended annually for the Instituses is the only appropriation she makes for the professional benefit of her teachers. It would not be too much to ask for a normal school which should give the regular school curriculum plus the professional training, but the limited area, population, and wealth of our State stand in the way of this. In such a case the next best thing is to leave the general education of teachers to the better graded schools of the State and to establish a Summer school for special training. Delaware owes something of this kind to her pupils, to her teachers, and to herself.

More public interest in the public schools would lead to good results. Too many people decry the work of our teachers without sufficient personal investigation as to the real work and needs of schools. The work is susceptible of great improvement, but Delaware's schools will compare favorably with those of many States which spend more money per capita for educational purposes, and her teachers, with judicious encouragement, and under capable leadership and control, would give her schools a worthy place among those of other States. The small appropriation necessary to carry on the proposed school would be one of the State's best paying investments.

The second recommendation carries its own justification. It is practically the township system of other States. One or two advanced pupils in a country district often take the time which the teacher should give to her lower classes. The town graded school could place such pupils in classes already formed and would receive compensation from the State.

This would result in better paid teachers and better grading in the town schools, while it would often give high school privileges to the country pupils without extra personal expense for tuition, and we should come nearer to realizing in practice the true theory that while the State is giving opportunities she should give equal opportunities to all.

W. B. THARP,
President State Principals' Association.

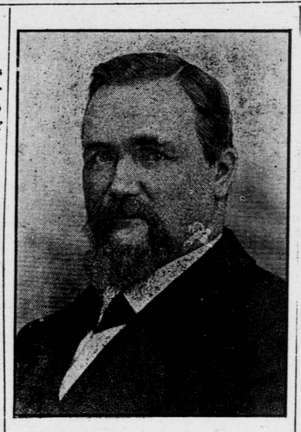
Senator Carey's Retirement.

The Washington correspondent of the New York Recorder says: "I am sorry that Carey is to go. He was a credit to his state and to the Senate, and he has fallen a victim to his own honesty of purpose and steadfast courage. But he went against the sentiment of his home people, and that for a politician is fatal. There was no reason in the world why Carey sould have voted for the repeal of the Sherman act except that he believed it was right. It was a mistake in judgement, and he probably would have known better another time. He thought that he was on the right track, and that in the end his people would have to come to his way of thinking. But he misread the signs of the times. Sometime Carey may come back to the Senate. He is young yet, and he is brainy. There ought to be a political future for this stamp even thought they sometimes happen to go wrong."

Senator Carey is a native of Delaware.

A Great Success.

The recent change made by the New York Weekly World in issuing two papers a week in place of one is meeting with great favor. The people appreciate the change and are taking advantage of it. Why pay a dollar a year for a WEEKLY paper when you can get the New York World TWICE a week for the same price! Keep informed of what is going on in the world and particularly in your own country. Congress is now in session. Every move will be of the greatest interest. Keep abreast of the times by reading the Twice-a Week World—two papers a week—104 papers a year for only $1.00.



Governor ..... Marvil

The Inauguration Witnessed by the Largest Assemblage on Record—The Reception and Ball Two Brilliant Functions—The Middletown Ladies Much Admired.

THE Inauguration of Joshua Marvil as Governor of Delaware on Tuesday was the consumation of a great event in the history of the State. The weather was perfect; bright sunshine and crisp, invigorating atmosphere made an ideal winter day and the greatest throng of people ever seen on any similar occasion in Dover was present to 'speed the parting guest," and welcome the new magistrate to his official position.

The incoming trains from the north and south brought the eager, expectant visitors, among whom were the leading men of the State. The National Guards of Delaware, the college cadets and the members of the numerous Republican clubs vied with each other in their manifestations of patriotic enthusiasm, and Dover itself was decked in gala array in honor of the occasion, It is estimated that at least 8000 people were on the street to witness the inaugural parade which formed at 10;30 in three divisions, the first consisting of First Regiment of Infantry, National Guard of the State Colonel George Marshall commanding. Second—The Delaware College Cadets, Governor Reynolds and staff, Governor elect Marvil and State Officials in carriages and all Republican Clubs. Third—Colored Republican Clubs.

The parade was reviewed in the Public Square by Governor Reynolds and Governor-elect Marvil, after which the Gubernatorial party was escorted to the Court House, and in the presence of the assembled Legislature and as many persons as could be packed into the old Court House, Associate Judge Marvil administered the oath of office on the same old Latin Bible famous for having been printed in 1516.

The Inaugural ceremonies were very simple and were soon over and after a benediction by Rev. Mr. Pilchard the enthusiastic crowd gave vent in loud and prolonged shouts and cheers for Governor Marvil. Long Live the Governor!

THE GOVERNOR'S RECEPTION.

The Governor's Reception was held in Court House from 8 to 9 p. m. and thousands of visitors had the pleasure of being introduced to Gov. Marvil. He was assisted in receiving by the following well known ladies of the state who added grace and beauty to the many other charms of the occasion: Mrs. N. B. Smithers, of Dover, in black silk and lace, Miss Ida Bacon of Laurel, white silk and lace, Miss May Sharp, of Laurel lavender silk and purple velvet, Mrs. Martin B. Burris, Middletown, nile green taffeta with green velvet and chiffon, Mrs. George Smith, Laurel, white silk and lace, Miss Lizzie Willis, Milford, lavender silk, white satin and lace.

Each lady carried a bouquet of exquite roses which had been presented by Gov. Marvil.

The Secretary of State Hon. N. B. Smithers, with all the courtly grace of the old school gentleman, introduced the visitors to his Excellency the Governor and to the ladies in attendance. Everyone expresses greet pleasure at the kindly courtesy with which Gov. Marvil greeted his guests. He is very pleasing in manner genial and social and very approachable.

THE INAUGURAL BALL.

The eventful day closed with the customary Inaugural Ball at the Rink. There were more guests invited than could be accommodated in comfort, and the result was a crush, the eager crowds ffiled the street to the opposite crossing, seeking admission to the scene of revelry. Dancing was nevertheless, the feature of the ball, and many were the amusing and grotesque figures cut by the dancers who were undaunted by the pressing crowds, in spite of obsticles, "tripped it off" as lightly as the circumstances would permit. The crowds began to disperse hortly after midnight; and the late comers had more comfort. The music was furnished by Prof. Oglesby's Orchestra, of Ghester, Pa.

The prettiest and most attractive and most popular lady and handsomest man seen at the ball are said to be from Middletown or nearby.

Dover had her hands full to accomodate the many visitors. The hotels and boarding houses were all full, the Richardson House alone having over 200 guests.

Those who attended the Inauguration from Middletown and vicinity were:
G. D. Kelley, A. G. Cox, J.C. Parker, Dr. H. Vaughan M. B. Burris, Hugh C. Browne, Frank Pool, Howard Pool, John C. Kelley, Reese Parker, Fred Crouch, Gray Taylor, Mr. Pitt, D, L. Dunning, Emlin Massey, Horato Pharo, Will Carpenter, Boyd Cleaver, A. S. Naudin, G. W. W. Naudain Dr. McKee, J. M. Clayton, Mrs. M. B. Burris, Mrs. John W. Jolls, Mrs. Theo. Armstrong, Miss Sallie Jolls, Miss Ethel Parvis, Miss Bessie Reynolds and others.

Unclaimed Letters.

List of unclaimed letters remainining in the Middletown post office which can be had by saying they are advertised: Mrs. L. Thompson, Miss Irena Hughes.

SENATOR HIGGINS.

What the People of Other States Think of Delaware's Most Worthy Son

The following from the New York Press and other leading papers expresses our sentiments and we believe those of the masses of the Republican party in Delaware:

"The Republicans of the State of Delaware should not hesitate for one moment in returning Anthony Higgins to the United States Senate. It is not creditable to Delaware Republicanism that there should be even a doubt of the re-election of this able distinguished and useful republican leader, The Republican party of Delaware cannot afford to commit suicide. The rejection of Senator Higgins for a candidate absolutely without experience in national legislation and notoriously lacking in the qualifications required in a Senator of the United States would be an act of inexcusable and fatal folly. The party has been built up to its present strength in Delaware largely hrough the loyalty, capacity and tireless energy of Senator Higgins. He has honored Delaware in the Senate, and Delaware must not dishonor herself by refusing to grant him the re-election he has splendidly earned."

N. Y. Sun (Dem.)

No new Republican senator has won more quickly than Mr. Higgins the confidence and respect of loyal citizens of both parties. His ability has put him in the first rank. With rare intuition, he has grasped and mastered the larger questions of manifest destiny, which are coming so rapidly to the front as to make the squabbles of partisanship during the past few years seem petty He is among the Americans in the Senate, and he should be kept there. Any other result at Dover will be a disgrace to Delaware and a national misfortune.

N. Y. Press (Rep.)

The eyes of the whole Republican party are fixed on the State of Delaware. The Republicans of the nation from Boston to San Francisco have a direct interest in the re-election of that able, courageous and faithful champion of Republicanism, Anthony Higgins. The first election of Senator Higgins gave Delaware a deserved and honorable prominence in the councils of the nation. His capacity, energy and unvarying devotion to Republican principles speedily made him a valued leader on the side of protection and Americanism, and the Republican party as a whole has a right to demand that he shall be returned to the position in which he rendered sterling service to the cause of American interests. Delaware Republicans are on trial before the country. Every consideration of patriotism and party loyalty requires that they shall re-elect Anthony Higgins to the Senate of the United States.

Brooklyn Eagle (Dem.)

If elections mean anything Delaware should have a Republican senator and if a caucus stands in any official relation to party action Mr. Higgins should certainly be chosen. He is a man of learning, dignity and character and one of the ablest lawyers in the state. For this reason it is the more to be hoped that Democrats will not join the Addicks forces in order to accomplish his defeat. The entire anti-Higgins campaign has been one of fraud and jobbery, and it would be a great triumph for decency should the senator be re-elected.

Irving Walker on Peaches.

At a meeting of the horticulturists held at Dover last week, Mr. W. Irving Walker of Baltimore and a large land owner in Kent and Queen Anne's county, made the following report on peaches:

With the exception of a few orchards along the water courses, the peach crop of 1894 was the usual off year failure, following the heavy crop and low prices of 1893, has produced good results, by causing growers who were holding on to trees of inferior fruit, to pull all such trees out, which, in case of a good crop in this year, should relieve the market of peaches so demoralizing to the trade.

The peach belt is not moving south as rapidly along the Chesapeake side of the Peninsula as it is along the line of the Delaware division of P., W. & B. railroad, there having been comparatively no unhealthy trees removed south of the Chester river during the past year.

The Maryland and Delaware Peninsula s the peach section of the States, and ever will be so far as quality of the fruit is concerned, but it rests with the grower to put his fruit. carefully assorted, in convenient and attractive packages, to sell on the market by the side of that marketer of California.

Two principal reasons for low prices to the Peninsula grower are:

First.—The lack of systematic distribution of the crop.

Second.—The careless attention given by the majority of growers to the assortment and packing of the fruit

This year promises a big crop, which will bring paying prices, providing distribution can be properly made and care is given as to package. I would suggest that a committee of five be appointed by the president to formulate a plan for marketing 1895 peach crop (providing there is a crop) the plan to be submitted to the growers in such a manner as the committee may think advisable.

THIS NEWSBOY WAS GRATEFUL.

A condition of moral degeneracy is commonly attributed to newsboys, but there are exceptions.

A physician who recently moved uptown into the eighties took an evening paper from a small newsboy and dived into his pocket for the change.

"That's all right, Doc," remarked the little chap. "I won't take no money. Don't you remember Jimmie you cured last winter with the fever?"

Then the physician recognized in the tall and sturdy boy a little chap whom he had pulled through a fever without any payment.

"But that's all right, Jimmie," he said "and you must certainly let me pay you for the paper."

"No," said the boy, "I won't. Where are you living up here, Doc? I want to come and see you."

He hasn't turned up to see the Doctor, but every a. m. and p. m. he slips a paper under the door, and to have a proper understanding in the begining with the first paper he scribbled a little notice:—"Please, Doc, accept these papers allus, from Jimmie."

GOV. HASTINGS'S INAUGURAL.

A Delaware Lady who Witnessed the Ceremonies Pictures the Gala scene.

HARRISBURG, Jan. 15th, 1895.

In spite of a few scurrying snow-flakes and a dull sky crowds of people gathered to see the inauguration of Gen. Hastings, Governor of Pennsylvania. At no previous inauguration were so many strangers present; the hotels and many private honses being crowded. All along the route selected for the parade the sidewalks were lined with spectators to whom the newly made Governor lifted his hat as he passed. About 12 o'clock Gen. Hastings and the members of his cabinet, Governor Pattison and his staff entered the main building; the General walking with uncovered head beside Governor Pattison. They were followed by the Justice of the Supreme Court and guests. Chief Justice James P. Strret administered the oath which was followed by the Governor's salute by Battery C.

Governor Hastings delivered his inaugural address in a clear distinct voice, and was greeted with wild enthusiasm. After the benediction had been pronounced, the distinguished party entered their carriages and the long line of soldiers, citizen and firemen accompanied by numerous bands, including the famous Ringold band made a grand parade, such as has not been seen in Harrisburg for a long time. The men who participated numbered many of the leading citizens of the State, and all leading Republican clubs from Philadelphia, notably the Continental club which elicited comments from the ladies as being the finest looking club in the line.

Governor and Mrs. Hastings gave a dinner from 6 to 8 to the cabinet officers and their wives. Later in the evening a public reception was given. Governor and Mrs. Hastings, were assisted by Lieut. Governor and Mrs. Walter Lyon, Secretary and Mrs. Frank Reeder, Attorney-General and Mrs. H. C. McCormick, Adjt. General Thomas J. Stewart, Insurante Commissioner and Mrs. James H. Lambert, Private Secretary and Mrs. Lewis Beither. The executive mansion was beautifully decorated with palms and choice flowers. During the hours from 8 to 11 hundreds of people shook hands with the Governor and his wife. The Governor's courtly manner and pleasant smile and the kindly greeting of Mrs. Hastings are things to be long remembered by those present.

ODESSA NOTES.

Miss Mary Chance spent Sunday with Miss Sallie Enos.

Miss Mary J. Doughten is quite ill at her home on Main St.

Miss Mary DuHammel Register is the guest of Miss Neal Townsend.

Miss Smith of Philadelphia is spending several weeks with Mrs. F. B. Watkins.

Mrs. E. N. Moore who has for some time been confined to her room is gradually improving.

The revival meetings at the M. E. church are still in progress and will be continued until further notice.

Messrs D. W. Corbit, W. W. Walker and G. L. Townsend were present at the Inaugural ceremonies on Tuesday last.

Miss Anna Gibson left on Thursday for Washington, D. C., where she will enjoy a portion of the social festivities of the Capital, the guest of Miss Natilie Woodall.

The numerous friends of Mr. William Lore were greatly grieved to hear of his death a few days since. Mr. Lore was well and favorably known in this community and leaves behind a host of admiring friends.

At a special meeting of the school board held on Friday it was deemed expedient to order an interchange of the rooms occupied by the two higher departments, so that the unusually large quota of advanced students now in attendance might be accomodated in the Principal's room.

The recent cold wave afforded the young people of this town a second indulgence in the favorite and healthful pastime of skating, but as the "wave" was of such short duration the thin ice guaranteed the cold baths, and consequent discomfiture of several too enthusiastic participants.

At the annual election of Stockholders of the Odessa Creamery Co., the following geatlemen were selected to serve the ensuing year are: Messrs. J. K. Williams, D. W. Corbit, A. P. Corbit, E. F. Moore, M. H. Davis, M. Keegan, C. Watkins, George Wittock, and G. L. Townsend.

A very pleasant entertainment was enjoyed by the children of the Intermediate Department of the public school a few evenings since. The teacher of that Department Miss Sawyer deserves unbounded praise for the kindly interest she has taken in their advancement and success can not help but attend her efforts.

Mrs. James H. George, who so recently was called upon to mourn the death of her husband, has been a second time afflicted by the sad news of a brother's death. As Mrs. George has ever commanded the admiration and respect of all whose privilege it has to know her, in just proportion she now receives the heartfelt sympathy of an appreciative and considerate community

Rev. R. I. Watkins discoursed to a large and appreciative congregation at the M. E. church on Sunday evening last. His theme was a recital of the enjoyment attendant upon wealth when selfishly made use of in this world, followed by condemnation to eternal punishment, as compared to earthly trials and tribulations, ultimately rewarded by reception in the better world beyond. He was listened to throughout with rapt attention.

An Oyster Supper will be given by the ladies of the Episcopal church in the Parish House, Thursday evening, January 24th. Proceeds for the benefit of the Episcopal church.

The wedding of Miss Florence E. Hutchinson and Mr. Richard C. McMullen took place in the M. E. church Thursday afternoon. Immediately at 2 o'clock the bridal party entered the church to the strains of the march played by Miss Sadie Craig. The bride attired in white silk with trimmings of lace and ribbons carrying a bouquet of white roses, accompanied by her father, was preceded by the four ushers, William Hutchinson, brother of the bride, Mr. H. Pyle and the Messrs. McMullen, brother and cousin of the groom. Miss Ethel George, niece of the groom, was the flower girl. She was attired in white silk, and carried roses. They were met at the altar by the groom and Rev. J. E. Amos who performed the ceremony, after which a reception was held at the home of the bride's father. The bride received many useful and valuable present. Mr. and Mrs. McMullen were driven to Newark where they took the train for Weshington, on their return they will go to Wilmington where they will reside.

THE SITUATION.

The eyes of the whole country are on Delaware, and the eyes of all Delaware are turned toward Dover. There never has been such interest in a Senatorial contest in or out of the State, and the result will determine the future of the Republican party in Delaware.

Eleven members of the Republican Legislature met in caucus on Monday night and nominated Anthony Higgins to succeed himself as United States Senator. The six men who favored Mr. Addicks and two who favored Mr. Massey refusing to attend the caucus.

There were thirteen men who first met at the hour appointed for the caucus, the absentees being Senator Hanby and Representatives Ball, Morgan, Robbins, Brown and Moore. After waiting nearly two hours, the absentees having refused to appear, Representative Fleming and Senator Pierce left the State House, with the understanding that they would return when wanted. But they failed to put in an appearance, and at midnight the eleven members proceeded to ballot for a candidate for Senator.

On the first ballot Mr. Higgins received 8 votes; blank, 2 and Massey, 1, On motion the nomination of Senator Higgins was made unanimous.

The eleven men were: Alriches, Reybold, Walker, Wilson, Money, McMullen, Pyle, Jolls, Moore, Townsend, Burton.

The news that the Addicks men had bolted the caucus was received here as an act of desperation, and an acknowledgement of Mr. Higgins' strength whose nomination on the first ballot these men sought to thwart by refusing to attend the caucus.

The election of the Senator has been thrown into the open session by the failure of the Republicen side of the Legislature to concur, and the intensest interest has attended the action of the members since the memorable caucus.

The Democrats in caucus, nominated Chancellor Walcott after several complimentary ballots.

The first vote was taken on Tuesday at noon in both Houses, each member responding at the roll call. The joint ballot was:

Higgins, 10; Addicks, 6; Massey, 3; Wolcott, 10; Tunnell, 1.

The Legislature has ballotted every day since Tuesday, in accordance with the law, and up to yesterday noon the situation was unchanged.

There are 30 members in the Delaware Legislature, 19 of whom are Republicans. It requires a majority of the whole Legislature to elect a Senator, hence the successful candidate must have 16 votes.

The supporters of Mr. Higgins stand for the party organization, and have the law, party usage and precedent on their side, beside the moralsupport of public sentiment in and out of the State.

We believe as we always have, that the good sense and party and State pride of the Republican members of the Legislature will overbalance personal preference in a matter of National moment. Mr. Higgins is the nominee of the party caucus, he is the people's choice, and we cannot see how loyal Republicans can do otherwise than vote for him.

There is the intensest interest manifest in this community, and the dead-lock and what it means is the general theme among the people here. Men who are in no sense politicians, but who have strong sense and clear vision, express strong views in favor of Mr. Higgins, and his hold upon the people is more and more manifest.

Mr. Higgins and Mr. Addicks each occupy appartments at the Richardson House, in Dover, and will probably remain on the scene of action until the dead-lock is broken. Those who are in a position to give a fair and unbiased opinion express the belief that the Addicks forces are weakening daily, and while it may be days or weeks before the question is settled it is believed that Mr. Higgins will certainly be elected.

CHARLES A. DANA delivered an address on Newspaper Making at Cornell University on Founder's Day, which was published in full in Monday's New York Sun. It is a valuable contribution especially helpful to the craft, and newspaper men and women will cherish it not only for the information given in regard to the wonderful revolutions in the mechanical art of newspaper making, but also for the intellectual standard raised. Mr. Dana is recognized as the Prince of modern newspaper men, and the most skillful American editor, and from his lofty intellectual height he naturally commands an outlook open to few, and his words are as delphian utterances to those who would know the secret of successful newspaper making.

GOVERNOR MARVIL.

Joshua H. Marvil was inaugurated Governor of the state of Delaware on Tuesday, and is the first Republican Governor since William Cannon, who died March 1st, 1865.

Delaware has cause to rejoice in the fact that an honest, intelligent christian gentleman is once more at the helm, and, so far as the Governor is concerned, there is no fear for the honor and safety of the commonwealth. And though he may not have the physical vigor of a Hercules, he has what is far better, intellectual vigor, strength of mind and moral character, that place him so far above some of his latter-day-predecessors, that they sink into nothingness beside him. Long live Governor Marvil, and may his administration be the most glorious in the history of the Diamond State!

THE PRINCE OF LIARS.

There are fools and fools! But Delaware, it seems, harbors the prize pumpkin jackass in the guise of a shallow-brained, anonymous liar afflicted with an itch for scribbling. This particular fool having, unfortunately for the world, succeeded in learning to write, and like "the fool that fired the Ephesian dome" lacking wit enough to make a proper use of his small faculties, pens a cowardly libel upon Governor Marvil and sends it to the Philadelphis Record, to the effect that his Excellency is so illiterate that he cannot even write etc.

Among Delawareans, the tale is too utterly silly to be seriously considered for a moment, but it will be sent—yes, already has been sent—broadcast over the whole country and from its very notoriety, will no doubt attract attention abroad, and be repeated as a truth to the discredit of the whole nation; and thus—thanks to this sap headed penny-a-liner—Delaware will be held up to the world's derision as the possessor of a Governor more densely ignorant than the ruler of Khom Tartary or Zululand!

"It is a dirty bird that fouls its own nest;" yet such a bird of ill-omen, roosts on Delaware soil, and is at pains to employ his feeble wits in besmirching his own state!

To Delawareans the mendacity of this screed is so palpable as to disclose the partisan venom that dictated its invention. But all fairminded Democrats will join the Republicans in repudiating the contemptible attempt at dishonoring the fair name of their common state by slandering the intelligent gentleman whom a majority of their own citizens have, by their suffrages, inducted into the honorable office of the Chief Majestrate.

Respect for that high office itself—nay, a mere sense of state pride—would have restrained anything but just such a babbling idiot from the perpetration of so petty a villification.

MR. BAYARD did not receive the complimentary vote of the Democrats for U. S. Senator. In fact he did not receive a single vote, and that in the face of the pleadings of the Every Evening! Whence this cruel disregard of the prayers of the "Only Democrat Daily in the State!"

DELAWARE owes Senator Hanby a debt of gratitude for having by his presence of mind at a critical moment, averted a great calamity! Let there forthwith be prayer in all the churches about the matter. That ancient formula "God save us from the Turk, the Devil and the Comet" may be suitably altered to "The Turk, the Devil and The Philadelphia Record." God save the Commonwealth!

THE school boys in New York are organized into an Anti-Cigarette League, having over two hundred thousand members, the boys themselves being the officers of the many Branches in the Grammar, Primary and Parochial Schools. It has been proven that cigarettes destroy both body and mind, and the work of the League is incalculable in arousing the boys to a realize that if they want to be strong, intelligent and able to make any headway in life they cannot afford to indulge in this pernicious habit. Teachers testify that the cigarette smokers not only have ill health but are incapable of mental exertion and invariably belong to the disreputable classes, among whom are truants, blockheads, etc. Physicians are also pronounced against the vice, and the crusade is growing in force. It is true that some decent people smoke cigarettes, but that does not make a cigarette decent, and it is a shame that the vile thing is allowed in any house, office or place of business. New York and Delaware have a cigarette law, but it seems to be a weakly thing. The boys themselves can do more than the law, and a branch league could very advantageously be formed in some rural districts as well as in the metropolis.

Dangerous Mercy.

The Daily Republican of Tuesday in referring to ex-Governor Reynolds' jail delivery record is quite inclined to commend his clemency and says:

"While one believes in carrying out the law to the fullest extent, another believes that where the community will not suffer from the abatement of pains and penalties, it is right to restore the prisoners to the liberty that they have thoughtlessly forfeited."

Does the Republican mean to say that it is a thoughtless act to murder a man in cold blood, or that the community will not suffer from having red handed criminals let loose upon it?

It is cause for regret and shame that there should be a newspaper within our borders that could give expression to such pernicious sentiments. Our venerable contemporary must have a very dim vision indeed not to perceive the viciousness of such a policy, and a very dangerous conception of justice to condon a policy that is condemned by every lover of law and order.

THE CEEVELAND COCKADE.

Mr. William Randal Cremer, M. P., is an enthusiast on the subject of international arbitration, and in particular of arbitration of whatever controversies may arise between the United States and Great Britain. He came to this coudtry in 1887, bearing the olive branch and proposals of arbitration, and on Wednesday he landed here again on the same pacific errand. The Teutonic, on which he was a passenger, was partially laden with printed copies of a memorial to the President and the Congress in favor of submitting to arbitration all disputes between this Government and Great Britain. This memorial is said to have been signed by 345 members of Parliament. Mr. Cremer is now in Washington or on his way thither to lay the memorial before the eyes of Mr. Cleveland and Congress, and to enforce its arguments with his own resources of persuasion.

It is a very noble thing to be a missionary of peace, and especially from a country so eminently peaceful, so averse to territorial or other encroachments, so moderate in its pretensions and so yielding in its relations with foreign powers as Great Britain is. We should be the last to throw either cold or hot water upon the private embassy of this herald of peace. It seems ungracious to tell him, as we must, that he comes upon a fruitless errand. There is no reason, and will be no chance for arbitration, as long as the Hon. Grover Cleveland is President, and the Hon. Walter Q. Gresham is Secretary of State. Those original diplomatists have a much better and quicker way than arbitration for settling international disputes. When any foreign Government makes a claim or sets up a pretension or pursues a course of policy contrary to the interest of the United States, Mr. Cleveland and Mr. Gresham consult the interests of peace much more effectually than by resorting to arbitration. They find out what the other country wants and let her have it. This is an infallible receipe for avoiding international trouble. To be sure, it comes pretty high. It may have to be paid for with the loss of national honor, prestige, reputation in the present, and in the future with the loss of commercial and naval and territorial strength and security. But it insures peace, at least for a time. From the foreign point of view it beats arbitration all hollow. In fact, it gives foreign nations, for nothing and just to oblige, what they could not win by means of war.

Evidently Mr. William Randal Cremer and his 344 fellow memorialists pay no attention to American affairs. Otherwise they would not go before Mr. Cleveland with a homily upon the importance and desirability of referring differences between the United States and Great Britain to arbitration. So long as Mr. Cleveland is President, such disputes will be avoided by the simple expedient of letting England have her way and carry her point. Instead of urging arbitration, Mr. Cremer, as a loyal Englishman, should thank Mr. Cleveland warmly for his industrious services to the cause of peace, and his willingness to postpone American to British interests. Under some Administrations Mr. Cremer might have found the eagle a somewhat pugnacious and ungentle bird, as the emblem of the United States. He falls on different times. The white feather is the Cleveland cockade.—N. Y. Sun.

LITERARY NOTES.

Among the most widely heralded and eagerly sought stories of recent production are "Dodo," "The Yellow Aster," "The Heavenly Twins" and others of like character. The reader will search the pages of these morbid tales in vain for a touch or gleam of literary genius. They appeal chiefly to prurient tastes, they are based on false conceptions of society and human nature and are as mischievous in their effects as they are unreal in portraiture. In spite of their manifold defects, however, they are what the trade would call "good sellers." In this expression the reader has a key to the secret of the publication of such volumes. Luckily the career of this kind of "Literary work" is short. It may serve to entertain and beguile for the hour, but for lasting pleasure and satisfaction the public will turn to wholesome and honest pages like those left us by the weird genius who sleeps on the summit of a South Pacific mountain.—Advertiser.

Dr. Parkhurst's New Word.

Dr. Parkhurst has coined a new word, and its aptness and clever construction are quite likely to make it famous. The eminent reformer's word is "Andromania," and of it he says:

"There is an element in the feminine world that is suffering from what I shall venture to call 'Andromania.' The word is not an English one, for the reason, I suppose, that the English language makers never supposed that we should need such a term. It is constructed on the same principle as the word 'Anglomania,' which means a passionate aping of everything that is English. 'Andromania' means similarly, a passionat aping of everything that is mannish."

Dr. Parkhurst makes his new word serve as the title for his first article in the next issue of The Ladies' Home Journal, and uses it for a vigorous treatment of the type of women for whom he invented it.

Magazines are Costly Things.

Albert Lynch, the famous French artist, who received the highest Salon prize for his panel of "Spring," has been engaged by The Ladies' Home Journal to draw a series of designs for the cover of that magazine, which, as the reading public knows, changes its cover design each month. Lynch is, perhaps, one of the best-paid artists in France, and these covers will cost The Ladies' Home Journal nearly $1000 apiece. But this only demonstrates the enormous expense to which magazines are put in the production of their numbers.—R. H. Stoddard, in New York Mail and Express.

Under the lead of Robert Louis Stevenson, not a little under his inspiration, there has come forward lately a whole group of young Scotch writers of remarkable grace and strength. The chief of these—Barrie, Crockett and Ian Maclaren—have written each a tribute to their brother and master Stevenson, which will appear with portraits and other pictures, in the February number of McClure's Magazine. In the same number will appear, also, an illustrated article on "Stevenson in the South Sea," written by a friend of Stevenson's who helped him in his preparations for the voyage and saw him aboard ship at San Francisco.

A new writer has recently appeared who bids fair to rival Barrie and Crockett on their own ground. He calls himself "Ian Maclarer," but in reality, he is a Mr. Watson, a minister of the Free Church of Scotland He will have a story in McClure's Magazine for February. The editor of McClure's has introduced to us several new writers, but perhaps none more promising than Ian Maclaren.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 15th, 1895:—The Democrats have since the defeat of Secretary Carlisle's crazy-quilt currency bill in the House about given up hope of securing any financial legislation at this session without the aid of the Republicans. Although they are running hither and thither and holding hourly conference they are accomplishing nothing, and they privately admit it. A definite appeal has been made by Democrats friendly to the administration to Senators Sherman and Allison, asking them to come to the rescue of the Treasury and to prepare a compromise non-partisan financial bill. It is not at all probable that these Senators will prepare a bill, but they, and other Republicans, have told the Democrats that, in their opinion, what the Treasury most needs is more revenue, and that a bill to increase the revenues of the government, either by an increase in the tariff on all dutiable articles, or by increasing the internal revenue tax upon special articles—beer, for instance—would receive the votes of the Republicans in both House and Senate.

For the Democrats to accept this hint would be to confess to the country—what is already plain to all except those who refuse to see—that the Democratic tariff policy is a failure and is at bottom responsible for all the troubles of the Treasury and of the country, but there are Democrats who do not hesitate to advocate that the confession be made, and while such action can hardly be said to be probable, it is quite as much so as that any financial bill will become a law at this session.

Representative Hitt, who was chairman of the House committee on Foreign Affairs in the last Republican House and who will almost certainly occupy the same position in the next House, is strongly opposed to the recommendation of Mr. Cleveland, that the United States should agree to give up the advantage it now holds under the reciprocity treaty with Hawaii, and agree to a modification of that treaty which would allow Great Britain to lease one of the smallest of the Hawaiian islands to be used as a station for a proposed submarine cable between Canada and Australia. While Mr. Hitt admits that cable communication with Hawaii would be very desirable, both for that country and the United States, he insists that this country should control such cable, not only as a matter of business sagacity but as a precaution in case of war. This is no new position for Mr. Hitt. As long ago as the Fifty-first Congress he tried to have the diplomatic and consular appropriation bill amended so as to provide for the survey of a cable route, between San Francisco and Honolulu.

Senator Teller, in replying to Senator Hill's attack on the income tax, did some plain talking, as he usually does when he speaks upon any subject. He said that any proposition for the repeal of the income tax must be accompanied by one to raise as much money, owing to the very pronounced need of the Treasury for money. He called attention to the fact that if the present monthly deficit was kept up the deficit for the year would reach $100,000,000; also, that the proceeds of $100,000,000 in bonds had already been swallowed up by the deficit under the Cleveland Administration and that the gold reserve fund was down to $77,000,000 and was still rapidly falling. "What the country is suffering from particularly," he continued, "is a lack of revenue, not a lack of gold in the Treasury. If the revenue was ample there would be no difficulty in acquiring gold, and no question of maintaining the parity between different kinds of money." He paid his respects to the administration thusly: "Whenever a member of the executive department appeals to the legislative department to do something, and has not a plan to present, it is good evidence that the executive branch of the government is in the wrong hands."

Training the Boy.

The boy whom you wish to see a courteous man must be taught to be considerate and courteous to his mother and sisters, and to the maid who waits upon him. He should learn that every service worth receiving merits a "Thank you," and never to be in too great a hurry when he enters the breakfast-room to say "Good morning" to everyone. He should take off his hat or cap when he greets a lady in the street, and never forget to do it when he enters a house, or an elavator in which there are also ladies. A boy trained to courtesy on these points will naturally develop thoughtfulness in many little ways manifested in the pleasant attentions so grateful to every woman and girl. While refining the boy you need not fear, in the least, its making a "girl-boy" of him; it has quite the opposite effect, developing all the manliness and chivalry in him. The atmosphere of a home where this pleasant interchange of little courtesies and attentions is habitual is congenial for the growth of strong attachments and life-enduring friendships, and to the developments of boys and girls into noble men and women who will go out from it to extend its influence. Indeed, every such home exercises a silent but irresistible influence in its immediate neighborhood, and upon all the friends who enjoy its hospitality.—From "Etiquette of Everyday Life," in Demorest's Magazine for February.

THE "NEW WOMAN."

She does not "languish in her bower,"
Or squander all the golden day
In fashioning a gaudy flower
Upon a worsted spray;
Nor is she quite content to wait
Behind her "rose-wreathed lattice-pane
Until beside her father's gate
The gallant Prince draws rein."

The brave "New Woman" scorns to sigh,
And count it "such a grevious thing"
That year on year should hurry by
And no gay suitor bring;
In labor's rank she takes her place,
With skilful hands and cultured mind;
Not always foremost in the race,
But never far behind.

And not less lightly fall her feet
Because they tread the busy ways;
She is no whit less fair and sweet
Than maids of olden days,
Who, gowned in samite or brocade,
Looked charming in their dainty guise,
But dwelt like violets in the shade,
With shy half-opened eyes.

Of life she takes a clearer view,
And through the press serenely moves,
Unfettered, free; with judgement true
Avoiding narrow grooves.
She reasons, and she understands;
And sometimes 'tis her joy and crown
To lift with strong yet tender hands
The burdens men lay down.

—E. Matheson in Chambers' Journal.

Our Woman's ....Column

THE nineteenth century mother must be progressive and keep in touch with the great and living questions of the day. I hold that it is a woman's solemn duty to read, and think, and learn, all she can of all that is passing around her, keeping herself in touch with the world she lives in. There is no question in my mind but her efficiency in everything she undertakes will thereby be increased. The lives and work of noble women who exercise this privilege, show that they are the most tender and patient of wives and mothers, and have a higher appreciation of their responsibilities at home. In the happiest and best regulated homes, the wife and mother has interest in all questions of the day, and is able to discuss them intelligently with her family.

Writing in the North American Review Miss Elizabeth Bisland pleads for giving women more technical training in the work for which they have for the most part to devote their lives. She says:

"The old practical rule of thumb apprenticeship of the household having passed away, something should replace it. Why should not schools for girls give courses in housewifery—not the mere cooking of chops or dusting of chairs, but instructions as to how houses should be made and furnished and their sanitation assured; in the chemistry of cooking, of foods and of assimilation; in the laws of physiology and hygene and something about fundamental economics of which the average woman is totally ignorant, though she is the spender and distributor of the money the men accumulate?"

***

There are two benevolent rich women in New York who seek to do good by freeing those from jail who are unjustly accused and also by giving bail in many cases where it is mere formality. One of these is Mrs. Ernestine Schaffner, who is better known as the "Toombs' Angel," from her continual visits to that famous court and prison. She is usually upon bail bonds aggregating $20,000, and in the ten years of her philanthropic career has been upon more than $500,000. In all that period she has lost only $1000, of which $900 was taken by a dishonest lawyer. Mrs. L. Hoffman, or the "Prison Angel," is the other of the remarkable pair. She makes a speciality of looking after foreigners, especially Germans, who get into trouble through ignorance of our language, laws and customs. She speaks German and French fluently.

***

Mrs. Russell Sage is the first woman to be elected a trustee of the Troy Female Seminary. This is in recognition of the gift of $250,000 made by her for the erection of a new hall, which will bear her husband's name. Mrs. Sage is one of the most charitable and energetic women in New York, and the money which a rich woman usually expends on diamonds goes to the poor of her church parish and the many people who come to her in distress.

***

The three women who have been elected to the Colorado Logislature have had a caucus and have decided not to wear their bonnets or hats in the Legislative chamber. This greatly improves the outlook of the men who may happen to draw seats immediately behind them.

PROTECTION FOR GIRLS,

In the January "Arena," an article of especial interest to woman is a symposium on the laws relating to the protection of girls, with a "black list" of states. In Delaware, where the age was 7, it has lately been raised. It is 10 years in North and South Carolina and in Alabama; 12 in Kentucky, Louisiana, Texas and Wisconsin; 13 in New Hampshire, Iowa and Utah; 14 in Arizona, California, Connecticut, Georgia, Idaho, Illinois, Indiana, Maine, Maryland, Michigan, Mjssouri, Nevada, New Mexico, North Dakota, Ohio, Oregon, Vermont and West Virginia; 15 in Delaware and Montana; 16 in Arkansas, Colorado, the District of Columbia, Massachusetts, New Jersey, New York, Pennsylvania, Rhode island, South Dakota, Tennessee and Washington; 17 in Florida; 18 in Wyoming and Kansas.

Mamma—What is Willie crying about?" Bridget—"Shure, ma'am, he wanted to go across the street to Tommy Brown's." "Well, why didn't you let him go?" "They were having charades he said, ma'am, and I wasn't shure as he'd had 'em yet."

Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. Testimonials sent free. Price 75c, per bottle. Sold by all Druggist.

Soaps which are guaranteed to remove "that doggy smell" are advertised by some druggists. Now, judging from the way in which society and stage ladies poke their little noses into the fluffy coats of their canine pets, would it not be in order to furnish young men in their set with a soap or a scent that would have "that doggy smell." The dear creatures evidently like it.

Common Sense

Should be used in attempting to cure that very disagreeable disease, catarrh. As catarrh originates in the blood, local applications can do no permanent good. The common sense method of treatment is to purify the blood, and for this purpose there is no preparation superior to Hood's Sarsaparilla.

"Will you kindly take off your hat?" said the gentleman behind the girl with the mammoth headgear. "I won't see my $1.50 worth of the show if you don't." "No, sir," replied the girl, amiably, as she turned around and smiled serenely upon him. "You may be deprived of a show worth $1.50, but please to remember you are permitted to see a hat worth $35."

THE SONG I NEVER SING.

BY JAMES WHITCOMB RILEY.

As when in dreams we sometimes hear
A melody so faint and fine,
And musically sweet and clear,
It flavors all the atmosphere
With harmony divine;
So, often in my waking dreams.
I hear a melody that seems
Like fairy voices whispering
To me the song I never sing.

Sometimes when brooding o'er the years
My lavish youth has thrown away,
When all the glowing past appears
But as a mirage that my tears
Have crumbled to decay.
I thrill to find the ache and pain
Of my remorse is stilled again
As, forward bent and listening,
I hear the song I never sing.

A murmuring of rhythmic words,
Adrift on tunes whose currents flow
Melodious with the trill of birds,
And far-off lowing of the herds.
In lands of long ago;
And every sound the truant loves
When first in blooming fields of spring
I heard the song I never sing.

The echoes of old voices, wound
In limped streams of laughter where
The river Time runs bubble-crowned,
And giddy eddies ripple round.
The lilies growing there;
Where roses, bending o'er the brink,
Drain their own kisses as they drink,
And ivies climb and twine and cling
About the song I never sing.

An ocean surge of sound that falls
As though a tide of heavenly art
Had tempested the gleaming halls
And crested o'er the golden walls
In showers upon my heart;
Thus, thus, with open arms and eyes
Uplifted toward the alien skies,
Forgetting every earthly thing,
I hear the song I never sing.

An Artistic .....Sacrifice

Circumstances That Alter Hearts as Well as Cases.

(Washington. Office of Gray, Ogilbie & Gray, Attorneys and Counsellors.)

O I understand that if this will were not in existance the property would all go to Mr. Crittenden?"

According to the terms of a previous will, yes. George Crittenden is your cousin, I believe."

"Distant cousins; but how did this last document, in my favor, come to be made? Please explain, Mr. Gray. I don't quite understand it all."

"You doubtless remember that your Uncle Denning was a strong admirer of art in all its branches, and when Crittenden, with an unmistakable talent for painting, drifted into the profession, it pleased him very much. It was then that the first will was made, knowing—as he did—what an uphill road the life of an artist generally is, and how long it takes before financial returns begin to come in. You also were developing a great deal of ability in the same line; and as you and Crittenden were a good deal with each other—I may as well be frank with you—he had an idea that in course of time you would naturally drift together; that is probably why your name was not mentioned in the first will, because to my personal knowledge, he thought a great deal of you. Then came reports from two or three reliable sources that Crittenden had somehow been taken up by a fashionable set and was decidedly neglecting his profession, while he lived for little or nothing at the expense of his new found friends. Finally, when Mr. Denning felt sure the young man was losing his ambition and settling down into that kind of a shiftless life, he sent for me and made this new will in your favor. I don't know when I have been more pleased to draw up a legal document, Miss Madge; you have my hearty congratulations."

Miss Tyler was in a brown study. She sat for several moments, with her chin resting in the palm of her hand, while the toe of one dainty shoe poked and patted a figure in the rug. To the white whiskered old lawyer, sitting comfortable back in his leather chair, she made a charming picture. A ray of sunlight, touching one pink ear and the soft tan glove on the arm of her chair, gave a warm coloring to that side of the graceful figure, the other being softened by the shadows in the corner.

"Is that first will still in existence?"

"Yes I have it here in the box with Mr. Denning's papers. It is void, however, on account of this other."

During her few moments' thought, rows of law books, the great fireplace, the walls, the room itself, had seemed to fade away. It was last summer again. She and Crittenden were back in Norfolk, sketching, painting, rambling about through the quaint old streets or over at Virginia Beach breathing in the soft sea and sunshine as they caught bit after bit of the grand ocean panorama and transferred it to their canvasses. Although he had never asked her to marry him, their daily life together had seemed to settle the question without discussion: the talent each possessed supplemented and encouraged the other's. Day after day drifted along in a quiet, wholesome, out-of-door happiness, and she instictively felt that it was merely his limited income which kept him from speaking of the beginning of their life together. In the fashionable West End boarding house, her mother's source of income, they came and went as naturally as if they already belonged to each other; even "Sam," their ebony familiar, who lugged the painting outfit and whose head figured in many of the "Darky" combinations they produced, had pictured to himself a life of sunshiny ease and indolence in the studio which, in his mind's eye, formed the prominent feature of their future home.

"Mr. Gray, I have decided to do what you may think a very foolish thing. I am going to destroy this will. Then you are at liberty to notify Mr. Crittenden that the property is his."

"My dear Miss Madge! Don't! I beg of you! Don't do anything of that kind! I assure you, upon my word of honor, that your uncle knew very well what he was about when he changed his mind. With all due respect to Mr. Crittenden, I am positive this money would be thrown away on him. In your case, it will place you and your mother in an independent position for life."

"It may be that you are right about Mr. Crittenden; but I doubt it, Mr. Gray. I have known him for several years. This money would enable him to study abroad as long as he pleased, and to develop, under the most favorable circumstances the talent he certainly has. Mother is comfortable at present, and probably will be as long as she lives. She has many warm friends of the Congressmen; and, as for myself, I am already earning an income from my pictures which is more than sufficient for my needs. Ever since Senator Hallett so kindly exhibited my work in his parlors I have been able to sell nearly everything I finished. I don't really need the money. If I had it, I should make no change in my manner of living; but in my cousin's case, it may be the means of placing him at the top of the profession." She did not mention the other single and far greater reason for her surrender of the property, nor did the old lawyer, her warm friend from her baby days, intimate that he guessed it, but both felt that they understood each other, and Mr. Mr. Gray made no further objections. He even handed over his pocket match box and stood by the fire place with her while the will, through which she was benefitted, burned itself to an impalpable web of cinders across the old andirons.

As she was going, she turned to him and said:

"You must never breathe a word to him of the existence of this last will; you won't will you?"

"Not for worlds, Madge!" People seldom guess the family secrets, the romances, the stories of love and hate which are hidden away among the musty old papers and books of a lawyer's office. This shall be a little private affair between us, and we'll both watch the result upon a certain young man of our acquaintance."

(New York, Crittenden's Bachelor Apartments in the "Croisic.")

"Well, I must say Crittenden, this doesn't look much like the old studio on Thirteenth street. More luxury and considerable less Bohemianism. How long have you been here?"

"About a month; haven't all my bric-a-brac in yet. What do you think of the taste and comfort of the thing?—by the way—Martin!—"

"Sir."

"Mix up a couple of Martigny cocktails, and—bring some of those last Turkish cigaretts."

"Yessir."

"First-class man that, Harry. I had him from the Hon. Charlie Grant of the Guards Couldn't get along without him, really. But look about the place and tell me what you think of it."

"Well, I don't see any thing the matter with it. With your artistic taste, the rooms were sure to be pretty near the correct thing. I see you're still faithful to Bayne; that "Elephant and Tiger" is one of his best bits. You always were an admirer of the Louis Seize, though for beauty and harmony I must say I prefer the magnificant Orientalism of the Hindu. Ye gods! what an earthly paradise of beautiful things a man can surround himself with if he has but the money. Where do you work?"

"Oh, there's a good north window in the spare bed room, and I've set up an easle there; but I'm not killing myself with work at present. Here are the cocktails—four fingers of antidote Harry. Now then! Here you go!"

"Ah-h-h-h; that's the stuff! Say, George, where do you get these cigaretts? Strikes me they'er better than the average."

"Oh, I import all my stuff direct, now."

"Look here, old chap, you're not going to give up the profession entirely are you? How will you put in the time?"

"Time!" (inhaling a great lungful of smoke, which escapes in two thin jets from his nose). "Time! Great Scott! I'm so busy now, with coaching parties, country breakfasts, afternoon teas and receptions, that I'm obliged to offend lots of people because I can't get around to everything." (Pause; more smoke). "I dare say I may do something for the academy each year, but, upon my soul, I don't see when I'm going to get the chance to work. If a fellow has the money and don't chip in with the smart set he might as well be dead" (here a set of smoke rings float lazily upward). "Got the money; no use slaving any more; might as well enjoy life while it lasts."

"That's right enough" (meditatively, as a spiral of fragrant smoke curls toward the ceiling). I suppose the average man would do the same thing; but I thought you used to go in for the glory of art and all that. With your ability you might accomplish almost anything you pleased."

"Oh, I dare say" (yawningly); but what's the use! Glory's well enough, but it don't materialize until after a fellow's dead; besides, I'm in the swim now; having a good time. See that photo over there on the mantle? What do you think of her?"

"By Jove! She's a beauty! who is she? New York girl,"

"Nop; Boston. Old Beacon Street family. Father Bostonian all through. Shell of reserve like a coat of ice until you get used to him; then he's all right; jolly old chap too. Met him at Lenox while Jack Winter was keeping me at his cottage. Didn't have any cash then, so thought I was out of the running. Shortly after old Gray put the property in my possession I ran over to Boston, called and incidently mentioned my good luck, and—to put it mildly—Harry I'm solid with the whole family now. They're great on art as an amateur profession over there, you know. Kitty wanted me to set up a studio on Commonwealth Avenue; said she'd come and paint with me every day. Gad I came very near doing it; but told her I thought of doing really one good thing every year—working only when the spirit moved. When she found that working every day meant giving up all her fun she said my idea was sensible. Deuced clever girl, Kitty."

"Who's this other one in the tailor gown? It's a sweet face; not so striking as your Bostonian, but, to my taste, the more beautiful of the two, in a quiet way.

"That! Oh, that's my little Washington cousin; the one I used to sketch with down in Norfolk. Jolly girl, Madge; used to think no end of her in the old days. Paints mightly well, too. Not much style though; mother keeps a swell boarding house there. By Jove! what a God send it would be to them if anything should happen to me; they'd come in for the property."

Brand took the picture over to the window for a better light. It seemed to him there was a tenderly, womanly look in the great brown eyes; something different from anything he had seen. As the smoke from the cigarette curled up throught the blond mustache, half-blinding one eye until it made him squint, he conjured up a mental impression of the girlish character behind the charming features.

"Crittenden," he said "if I were picking out a wife I'd choose this girl of the two."

"You may have her, old man, and my blessing in the bargain."

"I fancy the lady would challenge your right to dispose of her. A letter of introduction now, . . . might be more in your power to give."

"Seriously, Brand? You shall have it. But really, I don't think she's a girl you would marry. She's an incorrigible dauber; she'll paint all her life, married or single. Waltzes well, but the cotillon's Greek to her; never goes out, socially; crazy over theatre and opera; besides there's the boarding house.

"Oh, I say, Crittenden, cut it! You're not auctioning off a circassian, you know. I was only taking a rise out of you about the introduction. Getting late, isn't it? I may drop in at the club to-night; so long." As Martin civally bowed him out, neither he nor his master noticed that Brand had coolly pocketed the photograph before he left.

The conversation, however, had roused many a slumbering memory with Crittenden and as he sat watching a last touch of the sunlight as it warmed the rich colors of the smyrna carpet; thinking of the old Norfolk days when he and Madge scarcely counted the passing of one soft summer morning after the other, and contented with themselves and their work—wished for no greater happiness than daily existence together.

Whether his inner consciousness asked him two or three pertinent, retrospective questions or not, it is impossible to say; some men are not troubled much with conscience; but to his man he said, with a yawn, "Martin lay out my evening clothes. Get the bath ready, and have the brougham at the door at six sharp."

* * * * * *

"Oh, if I could only have half an hour more of daylight! We may not get another such striking effect for years. Do look, Mrs. Hallett! Have I caught it do you think?"

"You certainly have, Madge, better than Harry's, too. Don't you think so, Harry? Make him look, Madge."

"Here! Mr. Brand! don't you know it isn't fair to keep on working after I have stopped? Besides, you will ruin your eyes."

"Just a moment more, please, Miss Madge; I want to get the depth and tone in that black cloud; it's one of the grandest sights I ever saw on the Pacific Coast. We'll have a storm to-night worth coming across the continent to see."

"Not another second; it isn't fair. It's your turn to clean brushed, tonight and we've scarcely time to get washed up before dinner."

"All right you have certainly beaten me; but I was handicapped at the start by your ability to catch outline." So, picking up the stools and canvases, they move toward the house, stopping, now and then, to look at the grand picture at sea.

As they go in, the moonlight begins to strengthen, and they settle down on the cushions in the bay-window looking out over the water. Brand leaves them for a moment, and Mrs. Hallet asks: "Madge, do you never think of marrying some day?"

"Yes," musingly; "every woman does at times. Your own happy married life is a constant suggestion when I am with you; but there is an absorption about an artist's life which makes one independent of even human love, I sometimes think. I could sit here watching the moonlight on that rippling ocean, the black shadows of the rocks, the silver edging to those massive clouds, and forget even my own existence. My every day work brings me in contact—moment by moment—with the most beautiful things of life; and my idea of death is simply a gradual drifting out to see, to a somewhere beyond the horizon line with the afterglow of a Pacific sunset around me. A woman leading such a life forms certain ideals of men which are seldom realized; still a man who could appreciate all this with me—one who loved art for art's sake, and for the fascination of the work, might—Goodness!—Mr. Brand—how you startled me. We were speaking of the compensations of the artistic temperment. Do you not find them sufficient to take the place of the other interests which seem so necessary to the average man and woman?" (here Mrs. Hallett, intent upon some household duty, leaves them for a little while).

"Mmm—yes, nearly so; in all ways but one. A year ago, on just such an evening as this, I was in the "Taj" at Agia, perhaps the most weirdly beautiful spot on earth—under some circumstances; and, though I could not have expessed my delight in words—to save my life,—I could have silently appreciated the sympathy of some sweet woman with and above the sense of artistic pleasure. I don't know whether the love of a wife, without the sense of appreciation of beautiful things, would satisfy me; but the possession of both would be practically my idea of heaven. By the way, do you remember this picture?" (pulling one from his pocket and laying it in her lap).

"Why—yes; where did you get it? I gave it to my cousin, George Crittenden three years ago."

"And I found it in his swell bachelor apartment one day, before he was married; fell in love with the sweet soul I saw shining through the brown eyes, and quietly stole it then and there Madge?"

She turned from the beautiful night, outside, and, gently placing her hand in his, said, "perhaps."

CORNER OF SMILES.

"Robbie," said the visitor, kindly, "have you any more sisters and brothers?" "No," replied Robbie, solemnly, "I'm all the children we've got."

Marvelous Results.

From a letter written by Rev. J. Gunderman, of Dimondale, Mich., we are permitted to make this extract: "I have no hesitation in recommending Dr. King's New Discovery, as the results were almost marvelous in the case of my wife. While I was pastor of the Baptist Church at Rives Junction she was brought down with Pneumonia succeeding La Grippe. Terrible paroxysms of coughing would last hours with little interruption and it seemed as if she could not survive them. A friend recommended Dr. King's New Discovery; it was quick in its work and highly satisfactory in results." Trial bottles free at Dr. Vaughan's Pharmacy. Regular size 50c. and 1.00.

A Dakota court is struggling with a prisoner named Szczyz. We don't know what he is charged with, but from his name we suspect it is soda-water.

"So you don't like this country," said the native of America. 'Not a bit," replied the distinguished visitor from abroad. "You're down on the way we run things, aren't you?" "Teetotally." "Well," the native replied after a pause, during which the melancholy cleared from his brow, "we can be happy, nevertheless. Everybody concerned can give thanks that you don't have to live here."

Four Big Successes.

Having the needed merit to more than make good all the advertising claimed for them, the following four remedies have reached a phenomenal sale. Dr. King's New Discovery, for consumption, Coughs and Colds, each bottle guaranteed—Electric Bitters, the great remedy for Liver, Stomache and Kidneys. Bucklen's Arnica Salve, the best in the world, and Dr. King's New Life Pills which are a perfect pill. All these remedies are guaranteed to do just what is claimed for them and the dealer whose name is attached herewith will be glad to tell you more of them. Sold at Dr, Vaughan's Pharmacy.

TORTURED THIRTY YEARS

His Sufferings ended After Using Munyon's Rheumatism Cure.

Mr. George Smith of Tacony, Pa., says: "I suffered from rheumatism for 30 years, and had so many severe attacks that some of my joints were twisted out of shape. At times I suffered terrible pain, and although I tried many remedies, I never obtained any permanent relief until I procured Munyon's Rheumatism Cure. The action of this remedy was wonderfully quick, and although I have only taken a small quantity, I consider myself permanently cured."

Munyon's Rheumatism Cure is guaranteed to cure rheumatism in any part of the body. Acute or muscular rheumatism cured in from one to five days. It never fails to cure sharp, shooting pains in the arms, legs, sides, back or breast, or soreness in any part of the body in from one to three hours. It is guaranteed to promptly cure lameness, stiff and swollen joints, stiff back, and all pains in the hips and loins. Chronic rheumatism, sciatcia, lumbago, or aspirant for the nomination and only consented to become a candidate at the erne solicitation of his friends

SURGEON DENTISTS

AND REGULAR GRADUATES OF PENNSYLVANIA COLLEGE.

Office of twenty years standing; will continue at the old stand, corner of Main and Scott Streets, Middletown, Delaware.

All operations pertaining to the teeth and mouth will receive the best and most careful attention at moderate charges.

Our specialty is the saving and preserving of the teeth; not the indiscriminate extraction as is too often done.

Teeth Extracted Painlessly by the New Process without extra charge.

This Anaesthetic has been carefully prepared by the Dickson Anaesthetic Manufacturing Company.

To say that our office has the sole right for the use of the New Process would be misleading and deceptive.

Why—The Dental Society sometime since for the public safety has the much named preparation analyzed at the Philadelphia College of Pharmacy proving that it was being falsely represented to the public by men who gave it names that were misleading. The analysis showing that Cocaine is the essential property.

Consequently it is free to the world and anybody may use it by the simple purchase of the mixture at a nominal price—Teeth also Extracted by

NITROUS OXIDE GAS

The recent reduction of Dental Material enables us to furnish sets of Teeth at prices to suit the time—Satisfaction Assured.

COURTSHIP IN A FLAT.

It Is not What It Is Cracked up to be When Judged Fairly.

From the Chicago Tribune.

It was at a meeting of the Young Woman's Progressive Political Association. They greeted each other with an explosive kiss.

"I haven't seen you for ages, you dear thing!" said the girl with the poppies in her hat. "I'm so glad you came to-day—this is to be a perfectly ideal meeting. Are you married yet?"

"No; and I'm not likely to be as long as I live in a flat," responded the girl with the ostrich boa. "I'd like to have, 'Let all who enter here leave hope behind,' carved over the entrance to our building."

"If you want a responsive shoulder to weep on here is mine. I, too, live in a flat and when our landlord wanted a new name for the building I suggested the Anti-Matrimonial—he declined it, though, said it might affect the popularity of 'em. I just hate a flat. O, yes, we have steam heat, gas range—"

"Hardwood mantel, porcelain bath—"

"Tiled hearths, electric bells, and all modern conveniences," groaned the girl with the poppies. "Oh, don't; you make me ill!"

"Our flat has no doors at all, only portieres," moaned the girl with the feather boa, "and only the man who doesn't mean anything by it is bold enough to make love to a girl when a member of her family may be in ambush behind each curtain."

"I know. And the awful things that happen to one when one is temporarily isolated from one's best clothes. I was once caught in the bed room which opens off the parlor, with all my decent gowns in a wardrobe at the back of the flat, and a swell New Yorker, who only had one day in town, waiting in the parlor to see me. I don't know what would have happened if Minnie hadn't gone up to the flat above and lowered my tea gown out of the window in a basket."

"That's nothing. I had been washing my hair in the bath room one day, and had left part of it there to dry. I fled to my own room, which also opens off the parlor, at a sound of the door bell. It was Jim, and mamma had to bring me my hair in a hand satchel before I could go in."

"And I once dropped a hot curling iron down my back while Burt was waiting for me in the next room, and dared not scream lest he find out what I was doing."

"That comes of a man having no sister to familiarize—"

"Nothing of the sort It is the fault of a flat."

"Well, maybe so. Alma has made her father move to the suburbs and take a whole house."

"Yes; and I hear she is going to be married."

"Quite likely. Did you hear how she lost Victor?"

"No; do tell me!"

"He was calling on her the very evening before she left on that trip to Kansas, and she had strong hopes that he would commit himself. Just about as it was time for him to go, a great hubbub of voices arose in the next room, and, under cover of it, he said: 'Ah, Miss Alma, could—could—could you—'"

"Yes, yes; go on!"

"Just then her father's voice rose loud and clear: 'I tell you now,' he was saying, 'this thing has got to stop! Alma's extravagance is enough to ruin any man! No wonder she is 24 and can't—' Her mother stopped him there, but it was too late. Alma asked Victor what he was going to say and he stammered out: 'Could—could you tell me what time it is?"

"Poor Alma! And I know that by the time she got back from Kansas he was engaged to that little school teacher, who makes over her dresses twice and puts her money in the bank."

"Yes. O, my goodness! They are all going and we haven't heard a word they said. They were going to discuss the most vital question of the day, and—"

"For my part, the question we have been discussing is vital enough for me," replied the girl with poppies in her hat, and there were tears in her eyes as she said it.

A little Italian who came to Rock land last summer had never seen snow, and a recent storm was a great surprise. Looking out of his window and noticing some of the snow on the walk, he cried out: "I guess one of the lime kilns is busted." And then seeing some everywhere, he continued: "All the lime kilns must have busted."

"Say, Mister," said a little French Air child, as she watched the cattle enjoying thair cud, "do you have to buy gum for all of them cows to chew?"

Creditor, determinedly,—I shall call every week until you pay this account, sir. Debtor, blandly,—Then, sir, there seems every probability of our acquaintance ripening into friendship.—

Maud—"Ned proposed to me last night and I refused him." Marie—"I knew it." Maud—"How did you know it?" Marie—"He told me he had taken the fatal leap and landed on his feet."

Mrs. Smartset—For mercy's sake don't let me hear you talk about books in society again. Cultured Daughter—Dear me! Why not? Mrs. Smartset—Strangers will think you have been a cash girl in a book store.

"I SUFFERED six years with indigestion and constipation. Got so weak and nervous I had to give up work, feeling miserable all the time. "I tried many remedies and doctors without benefit. Was finally induced to give a trial, with the result that I again work at my business, eat regularly, and enjoy my meals as I have not done in years."

ECZEMA From early childhood until I was grown my family spent a fortune trying to cure me of this disease. I visited Hot Springs, and was treated by the best medical men, but was not benefited. When all things had failed I determined to try S. S. S., and in four months was entirely cured. The terrible Eczema was gone, not a sign of it left; my general health built up, and I have never had any return of the disease. I have since recommended S. S. S. to a number of friends for skin diseases, and have never yet known a failure to cure. GEO. W. IRWIN, Irwin, Pa.

1895. The Sun. 1895.

BALTIMORE, MD.

The paper of the people. For the people Honest in Motive. Fearless in Expression Sound in principle. Unswerving in its Allegiance to Right Theories and Right Practices.

The Sun publishes all the news all the time, but it does not allow its columns to be degraded by unclean, immoral or purely sensational matter.

Editorially, The Sun is the consistent and unchanging champion and defender of popular rights and interests against political machines and monopolies of every character. Independent in all things, extreme in none. It is for good laws, good government and good order.

By mail Fifty Cents a month, Six Dollars a year.

The Baltimore Weekly Sun

The Weekly Sun publishes all the news of each week, giving complete accounts of all events of interest throughout the world. As an agricultural paper the Weekly Sun is unsurpassed. It is edited by writers of practical experience, who know what farming means and what farmers want in an agricultural paper. It contains regular reports of the work of the agricultural experiment stations throughout the country, of the proceedings of farmer's clubs and institutes, and the discussion of new methods and ideas in agriculture. Its Market Reports, Poultry Department and Veterinary column are particulary valuable to country readers. Every issue contains Stories, Poems, Household and Puzzle Columns, a variety of interesting and instructive selected matter and other features, which make it a welcome visitor to city and country homes alike.

One dollar a year. Inducements to getters-up of clubs for the Weekly Sun. Both the Daily and Weekly Sun mailed free of postage in the United States, Canada and Mexico. Payments invariably in advance. Address

Low Tariff Sale

Not Stopping to Consider cost-Goods must be sold.

Not Stopping to Consider cost-Goods must be sold.

In consequence of the great change in the tariff we have determined to sell all the large stock of Clothing we now have on hand, consistiug of Men's Suits and Overcoats—Boys' Suits and Overcoats—Children's Suits and Overcoats and Men's, Boys' and Children's Pantaloons.

Think It Over.

All wool Men's Suits, $5, Formerly $10.

All wool Men's Suits, $5, Formerly $10.

Change in the Tariff,

That's why such Unprecedented Prices.

That's why such Unprecedented Prices,

Men's all wool Suits, were $8, $9, $10, now $5.

Men's Suits, were $9, $7, now $4.

Men's Suits, were $12, you can now buy for $7.

Men's Suits, were $14, $16, now $8.

Men's Suits, were $18, $20, $22, now $10 and $12.

Select what you wish and if you don't like it after you get home bring it back and get your money for it.

All wool down-to-your-feet Storm Overcoat with Big Collar,

$5.00

Youths' Suits, were $5. now $3.
